

DESCRIPTION

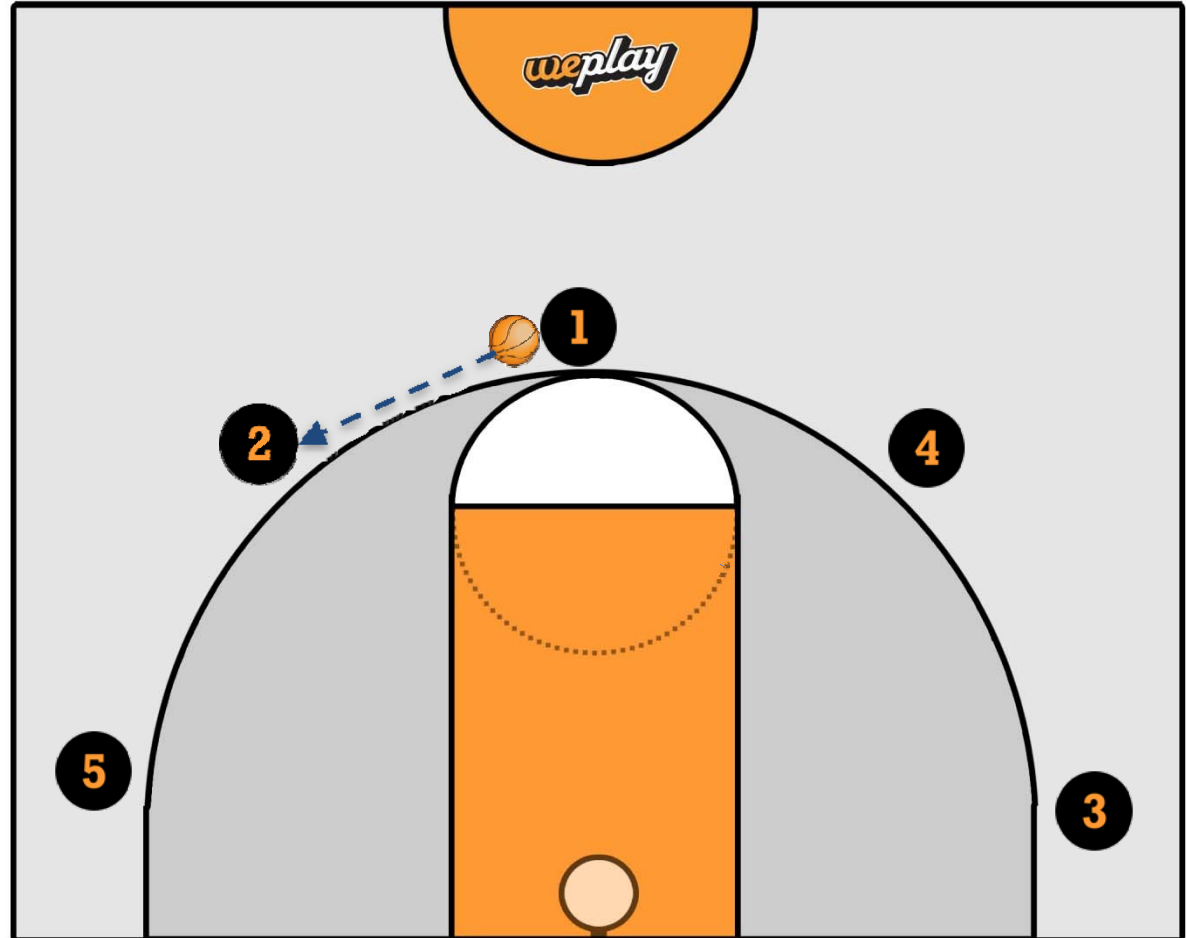

The rotation and drive play aims to exhaust a defense from helping out by passing the ball in rotation around the 3-point arc, particularly effective if they are in some kind of zone defense. The play should result in the offensive player in the corner dribble-driving to the basket for a layup.

1. The (1) passes to the (2) who then passes to the (5); the (5) passes it back to the (2) until passes are made that reaches the (3) in the opposite end.
2. When the (3) gets the ball, he/she has the option to rotate the ball back and wait to receive it again once the defense is tired or beat his man off the dribble and drive baseline for the layup.
